1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1 to 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Yamada et al.

Yamada et al. teach heat conductive silicone compositions. See components (A), (C), (D) and (E) on column 2 which correspond to claimed components (a), (c), (b) and (e), respectively. The amounts of (A) and (E) correspond to the amounts of (a) and (d) claimed. The Examiner notes that the presence of the compound (B) is embraced by the claims due to the language "comprising".

Particular attention is drawn to the examples and Table 2. In these examples the total number of Si-H groups in (B) and (C) is used to determine the ratio of Si-H groups to Si-Vi groups. However Table 2 also shows the number of Si-H groups from (B) compared to the number of Si-H groups from (C) and from this one can determine that the total number of Si-H groups from (C) is sufficient to meet the .1 to 5 moles of Si-H group requirement claimed. For instance in Example 6, there is a 4:1 ratio of Si-H groups from (C) to Si-H groups from (B). This means that 4/5 of all Si-H groups come from (C). Thus of the 1.4 Si-H groups per Si-Vi groups, 1.12 Si-H groups from (C) are present for each Si-Vi group. This falls within the breadth of the range claimed for component (c). As such this example meets instant claim 1.

The thermally conductive fillers used in the examples are Al powder and ZnO powder, meeting claim 2. Column 7, lines 25 and on, teaches forming a sheet from the silicone composition and applying it to a heat dissipator, meeting instant claims 3 and 4.
